SITUATION SUMMARY

CDC AND TEXAS HEALTH DEPARTMENT CONFIRM FIRST EBOLA CASE DIAGNOSED IN THE UNITED STATES

- The Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC) confirmed yesterday, 09/30/14, through laboratory tests, the first case of Ebola to be diagnosed in the United States in a person who had traveled to Dallas, Texas from West Africa. The patient did not have symptoms when leaving West Africa, but developed symptoms approximately five days after arriving in the United States on September 20, 2014.
- The person sought medical care at Texas Health Presbyterian Hospital of Dallas after developing symptoms consistent with Ebola. Based on the person's travel history and symptoms, CDC recommended testing for Ebola. The medical facility isolated the patient and sent specimens for testing at CDC and at a Texas lab participating in the CDC's Laboratory Response Network. CDC and the Texas Health Department reported the laboratory test results to the medical center to inform the patient. A CDC team is being dispatched to Dallas.
- The ill person did not exhibit symptoms of Ebola during the flights from West Africa and CDC does not recommend that people on the same commercial airline flights undergo monitoring, as Ebola is only contagious if the person is experiencing active symptoms. The person reported developing symptoms several days after arriving in the United States.

CDPH EBOLA STATEMENT

- The California Department of Public Health (CDPH) continues to work with local health departments and health care providers statewide to identify patients who have traveled to countries affected by Ebola. CDPH is directing health providers to follow protocols established by the federal Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC) in the diagnosis and treatment of these patients. People returning from the affected areas who develop signs or symptoms of Ebola should be isolated and their blood sent to CDC for testing. Some low-risk patients may be tested out of an abundance of caution. CDPH works with local health departments and hospitals to arrange for proper specimen shipment and Ebola virus confirmatory testing.
- There are currently no confirmed cases of Ebola in California. There have been no patients admitted to California hospitals who are considered to be at high risk of Ebola according to CDC criteria.
- If a person has travelled to an affected country and develops a fever within three weeks of their return, they should contact their health care provider and let the provider know of their travel history.

- The risk of the spread of Ebola in California remains low, but it would not be surprising to eventually see a case here because of our location, and the many people from throughout the world who travel here. Any patient suspected of having Ebola can be safely managed in a California hospital following recommended isolation and infection control procedures. Suspect cases of Ebola will be investigated by local health departments in consultation with CDPH.
- State and local public health officials in California are monitoring the situation closely and taking steps to keep Californians safe. Our advanced health care system has appropriate protocols in place to prevent the spread of this often deadly disease.
- Ebola is an infectious disease caused by the Ebola virus. Symptoms may appear anywhere from two to 21 days after exposure and include fever, headache, joint and muscle aches, weakness, diarrhea, vomiting, stomach pain and abnormal bleeding. It is classified as a viral hemorrhagic fever (VHF) because of the fever and abnormal bleeding. Among the VHFs, Ebola is feared because of its high mortality. There are no specific treatments but supportive therapy can be provided to address bleeding and other complications.

Cal EOC Incident – 2014 Drought

- SOC / Inland REOC remains activated in support of 2014 Drought

SITUATION SUMMARY

Northern California Weather of Concern

- Dry and warming weather this expected this week. Locally breezy north to east winds are anticipated during the middle of the week as high pressure rebuilds across the region. Daytime highs will be above normal Thursday through Saturday.

Southern California Weather of Concern

- A high pressure system will build into the Great Basin today and bring the first Santa Ana Wind event to the area since May. An offshore flow pattern with periods of gusty winds and hot and dry weather will develop tonight into Thursday. The pattern will likely persist through the weekend and into early next week with temperatures well above normal and near record levels. Fire weather conditions will deteriorate through Thursday morning. Rapid fire spread or large fire growth may develop later this week and through the weekend, especially after sunrise when climatologically the strongest Santa Ana wind gusts typically occur. A cooling trend could start as early as Sunday when high pressure breaks down.
  - Hot, Dry, and Windy offshore weather pattern expected for late this week and through the weekend.
  - Potential for large fire growth and rapid fire spread as critical fire weather conditions will likely develop late this week.
  - Record heat could bring a potential for heat related illness or stress.

Main Impacts:

- Potential for large fire growth and rapid fire spread between tonight and Sunday as hot, dry and windy offshore weather pattern develops.
  - A Fire Weather Watch is in effect for portions of Los Angeles and Ventura Counties today through Friday.
- Heat related illness or fatigue may occur as near record heat develops across the region, especially in the Ventura and Los Angeles County valleys.
- Tree limbs, small branches and power lines may be downed by the gusty Santa Ana winds, mainly between tonight and Thursday.
- Elevated rip currents rescues at area beaches this weekend due to a long period southerly swell and people traveling to the beaches to escape the hot weather.

WEATHER

WEATHER SYNOPSIS BY REGION:

NORTHERN CALIFORNIA AND CENTRAL COASTAL AREAS:

Eureka Weather:

A drying and warming trend will continue today through the end of the week as a strong ridge of high pressure builds across the region.

San Francisco Weather:

Breezy offshore winds in the hills this morning will ease by midday. Under sunny skies, expect much warmer temperatures this afternoon with highs into the 80s and lower 90s for most of the Bay Area. Warm to hot weather will continue Thursday through the weekend with strong high pressure centered over California. Some subtle cooling will return by early next week as onshore flow returns ahead of the next upper trough.

CENTRAL CALIFORNIA AND SOUTHERN SAN JOAQUIN VALLEY

Sacramento Weather:

Dry and warmer weather this week as high pressure rebuilds. Breezy to locally windy northerly winds today, decreasing Thursday.

Hanford Weather:

A warming trend will continue through the week and into the weekend as high pressure builds over the area. By Thursday, daytime high temperatures through the valley will reach above normal values with this trend continuing into at least early next week.

WEATHER

WEATHER SYNOPSIS BY REGION:

SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA:

Los Angeles Weather:

A significant warming trend is expected into the weekend as surface high pressure builds into the Great Basin and offshore flow strengthens through late this week. Weaker offshore flow is expected for the weekend but hot and dry weather will continue as high pressure builds aloft. Cooler weather is possible early to mid-next week.

Extreme Southwestern California Including Orange, San Diego, Western Riverside and Southwestern San Bernardino Counties:

A weak coastal eddy will bring areas of low clouds to coastal areas early this morning. High pressure aloft and offshore flow will bring much warmer high temperatures for Thursday through Sunday, especially west of the mountains. The offshore flow will also bring gusty northeast winds at times for Thursday into Saturday with the strongest winds on Thursday. Weak onshore flow is expected to return for Sunday through early next week with slow cooling spreading inland and with a return of night and morning coastal low clouds and fog.

Southeast California Weather:

A weather system passing to the north of the area will generate north to northeasterly breezes today with a persistent temperature forecast. High pressure ridge building into the region will lead a warming trend for the rest of the week with above normal temperatures peaking on Saturday. There will be little change in temperatures over the weekend along with light winds. High pressure weakens next week resulting in a very slow cooling trend.
